About the PhD-Training School:

Local governments all over Europe are in a period of intense reform activity, not least of all because in some countries they have been the level of government most seriously affected by the still expanding global financial and economic crisis. They are simultaneously faced by a variety of – partly contradictory – reform pressures, often aimed at conflicting reform objectives (e.g. efficiency vs. participation). Against this background, the PhD-Training School is meant to discuss reforms, experiments and changes in local democracy and local public sector institutions.

The course is intended to provide training in theories and methods to be applied in the study of local public sector reforms and democracy, especially in comparative perspectives. The Training Schools overall topic is “innovation in local governance.” Therefore, issues/topics such as governance, networks, enabling authorities, collaborative arrangements and the urban environment (e.g. city-regions, metropolitan areas etc.) and all topics dealing with contemporary modes of decision- and policy-making are welcome. In addition, more “classical” topics dealing with reform themes such as participatory and direct democracy, territorial and functional reforms and (post-) New Public Management reforms are welcome.

About the COST Action:

‘LocRef’ is an EU funded network of researchers coming from 31 European countries who work in the field of local public sector reforms. The Action will provide a platform for establishing a new set of comparative knowledge on local public sector reforms and for integrating the fragmented research activities in this neglected area of investigation. It aims to enhance the scope of the conceptual foundations as well as the methodological rigor of comparative public administration. The research activities will yield policy relevant knowledge concerning local reform measures from a European perspective, which can then be utilized to improve policy making for future public sector modernization.

A major objective of the Action is to encourage young researchers in network building to promote their future careers. The aim is to strengthen their methodological skills as well as their conceptual and comparative knowledge on local public sector reforms. ### About the Anargyrion and Korgialenion School of Spetses

The Anargyrion and Korgialenion College Foundation has been entrusted with the implementation of the vision and the management of the bequest of national benefactor Sotirios Anargyros. The facilities of the Anargyrion and Korgialenion College near the historic township of Spetses and the unique pinewood forest of the Foundation – covering approximately half of the island’s surface and ensuring its sustainable development – have played a key role in the Foundation’s activities during the period of operation of the College (1928-1983) and during the period that followed. Indeed, with gradual improvements, the facilities have been a pole of attraction for national and international education and research activities. Moreover, the facilities – and especially the ancient type 1100-seat theatre on the adjacent hill owned by the Foundation - have hosted numerous cultural activities.

About the University of Athens

The idea of establishing a University in Greece as a "stronghold of enlightenment and freedom", emerged alongside with the Greek War of Independence, also known as the Greek Revolution. The National and Kapodistrian University of Athens, officially founded in April 14th, 1837, is the first University not only of Greece but both the Balkan peninsula and the Eastern Mediterranean region. Today, it is one of the largest universities in Europe and still perhaps the most prestigious university in the country. With a student body of about 125,000 undergraduate and postgraduate students, over 2,000 members of academic staff and approximately 1,300 assisting, administrative and secretarial staff, the University of Athens aims at excellence in both teaching and research in a significantly varied range of disciplines, reaching from medicine and physics to law and archeology.

About EUROLOC and EURA:

The Standing Group in Local Government Studies of the European Consortium of Political Research (LOGOPOL) has been holding Summer Schools in Local Government and Governance Studies since 1995. In 2012, the Standing Group in Local Government Studies and EURA (European Research Association) joined their forces to work together by organizing the EUROLOC and EURA Summer School in Local Government and Governance studies. This Summer School supports PhD students in their research activities by giving them the opportunity to present and discuss their work with others and inspire their research. The aim is to bring students up-to-date with ongoing research in the field of local government and governance, develop links between PhD students and experienced researchers in the field of local government and governance studies who work with the same kind of research questions. They want to stimulate scientific exchange among students of different backgrounds, foster cross-national working relations among the participants, contribute to the development of the comparative study of local politics and administration, but also discuss methodological questions of comparative local research either nationally or internationally, either quantitatively or qualitatively. In 2015, EUROLOC and EURA will not organize a separate summer school in local governance studies but participate in the organization of the common PhD training course with the COST Action and the University of Athens to promote the common aims. For more information about EUROLOC, EURA and the previous summer schools see http://www.uni-stuttgart.de/soz/avps/euroloc\_neu/home/index.html
