Renewing Europe's housing

Edited by Richard Turkington and Christopher Watson

"This new account of the challenges presented by an ageing housing stock and policy responses across Europe fills a significant gap. It is essential reading for those concerned with the future of housing." Alan Murie, Emeritus Professor of Urban and Regional Studies, University of Birmingham

"An excellent overview of housing renewal policies across nine European countries, offering a deeper understanding of the barriers to the implementation of more effective and integrated urban renewal policies in different cultures." Martin Lux, Institute of Sociology, Academy of Sciences of Czech Republic

Public policy gives too little attention to the widespread and still growing problem of Europe's ageing and poor quality housing.

This timely book aims to redress that balance. After an introductory chapter, expert contributors from nine European countries provide contemporary accounts of housing renewal policy and practice in their physical, economic, social, community and cultural aspects. Shared concerns over energy performance and conservation, social protection and inclusion, and the roles and responsibilities of the public and private sectors form the basis of a policy agenda for housing renewal. The book concludes by examining what has been achieved; and considers future prospects for the continuing challenge of renewing Europe's housing.

Academics, practitioners, policy-makers and students of housing, urban studies, planning, regeneration, environmental health and sustainability will all want to read this book.
